Patients with chronic lymphocytic leukemia (CLL) benefit from treatment with alemtuzumab (alemtuzumab-based immunotherapy). Subsequent administration of total lymphoid irradiation (TLI) causes side-effects that can reduce quality of life of patients. However, TLI might favour the remission of CLL as it induces clonal deletion of CLL cells. On the other hand, TLI has been associated with a very high incidence of renal impairment which increases with the size of the irradiated kidney area. We looked for an ideal TLI regimen for induction of remission by comparing two TLI-regimens: TLI-1 was delivered in 2 fractions of 10 Gy each, 24 h apart
